Dr. Anthony Meadows

Director of Graduate Music Therapy Studies

Dr. Meadows brings more than 25 years of clinical experience and more than 20 years of experience as a researcher and educator. He served as Editor in Chief of Music Therapy Perspectives from 2011-2018, Chair of the MAR-AMTA Research Committee (2008-2015), and has served for many years on the AMTA Assembly of Delegates. He has published widely and has twice received the Flagler Fultz Research Award.

Dr. Meadows has worked in a wide range of clinical settings, including more than 10 years experience with adults in a cancer center. His mentorship approach to graduate education fosters strong connections between students and faculty, allowing students to discover and thrive.

Dr. Meadows holds degrees from Temple University (MMT, PhD) and the University of Melbourne (B. Mus). He is also a Fellow of the Association for Music and Imagery, and a Licensed Professional Counselor (PA).

PROGRAM DESCRIPTION

The Professional Studies Graduate Program for Music Therapy Certification Eligibility at Shenandoah Conservatory is designed for individuals who currently hold a bachelor's degree in music or a related field and wish to train as a music therapist, gaining the nationally recognized credential, Music Therapist-Board Certified (MT-BC). The Professional Studies Graduate Program in Music Therapy Certification Eligibility emphasizes music foundations, clinical foundations (including studies in psychology, human development, exceptionality, psychopathology, principles of therapy and the therapeutic relationship) and music therapy foundations, where you will progress through an integrated sequence of courses that promote professional skills, self-awareness and ethical practice.

Mentorship and a dynamic learning experience are central to this process. Our faculty combine decades of clinical experience with their unique perspectives and practices to provide you with an educational program tailored to your learning needs.

WHAT OUR STUDENTS LEARN

Becoming a music therapist is an unfolding process of discovery. Like therapy itself, our classes not only teach you how to be a skilled therapist, but also how to think therapeutically, build on your music skills and develop an inquisitive, self-reflective stance.

We bring our extensive clinical experience into the classroom to guide you to become an empathic, confident therapist, building upon your identity and skills while doing so. For some students, this is work with children; for others, work with adults. We understand your unique backgrounds and life experiences and build upon both as you work towards professional knowledge and competence as a music therapist.

WHAT MAKES OUR PROGRAM UNIQUE?

Celebrating our 45th year in 2020, the Music Therapy program at Shenandoah University is one of only two programs in the state of Virginia and has become a hub for music therapy activity in the community. Our partnerships with agencies such as the Blue Ridge Hospice, Westminster Canterbury, and A Place to Be offer numerous opportunities for you to gain hands-on experience beyond the classroom, and to increase your employment possibilities after graduation.

Each faculty member in the music therapy department has established particular areas of expertise that are foundational to their expression as music therapists and music therapy researchers. You'll learn from experienced and supportive professors and benefit from access to the Marian Sung Music Therapy Clinic, a unique community partnership that allows you to observe and simulate music therapy sessions.

The SU Music Therapy Association (SUMTA) provides links to state, regional, and national organizations in music therapy, and provides you with service-oriented opportunities in the community, as well as opportunities to attend music therapy workshops and conferences in support of your education at Shenandoah.
